WARSAW, MARCH 9.

Koſcioſko, and his few friends ſtill remain priſoners at Peterſburg. Their firmneſs and conſiſtency gain them the eſteem even of their enemies. They are well treated; and that too by the orders of the Imperial Catharine—but ſhe will never work on the affections of Koſcioſko. He lives in a palace, has a table every day of 16 covers, and is attended every day by a phyſician of the court, who has orders to inquire reſpecting his health in the name of the Empreſs; but he has not liberty to write. He does not read, ſpeaks little, and will ſit ſtill for hours together leaning his head on his hand. In his misfortunes one companion remains with him; and that is a negro which came with him from the United States of America, and has been his inſeparable companion.

A rupture between Ruſſia and the Ottoman Porte, grows daily more inevitable.

PORTUGAL.

LISBON, MARCH 8.

The Polypheme, in paſſing from Brazil in Aſia, hs been taken after an action of five hours, by the French frigate Convention of 44 guns. She had on board 20,000 louis d'or value in corals, and about 90,000 louis d'or value in Portugueſe gold and Spaniſh ſilver. After taking out the property, and ſpiking her cannon, the French put on board a number of Engliſh priſoners, and left her.

FRANCE.

PARIS, APRIL 5.

The Executive Directory has named Citizen Pichegru, ci-devant commander in chief of the army of the Rhine, Ambaſſador of the French republic in Sweden.

Letter from the Executive Directory to General Pichegru.

When the Executive Directory, Citizen General, determined to liſten to your reiterated requeſts for a ſucceſſor in the command of the army of the Rhine, they only acceded to your wiſhes in the hope of again employing you in the ſervice of the republic in a manner equally honorable to you and herſelf.

It has thought, that after having contributed ſo powerfully to eſtabliſh the liberty of France, with arms in your hands, you would in another character participate in its confirmation, in a manner no leſs efficacious. It is, therefore, that jealous of giving you a proof of its eſteem and confidence, the Directory has named you Ambaſſador of the French republic in Sweden.

The Executive Directory is aſſured, that when treating of the great intereſts of the ſtate, you will add to the eclat of your warlike exploits, in the important ſucceſs of your political negociations; and that in them you will crown your glory, and acquire a new title to the gratitude of the nation.

LETOURNEUR, Preſident.
LAGARDE, Secretary-General.

[General Pichegru has accepted. His reſignation of the army command, and acceptance of that of an Ambaſſador, ſurpriſes many: But at Sweden, it is likely, he will become one of the mediators of a general peace, his appointment may be preparatory to the event.]

APRIL 10.

Letters from Cadiz, of the 21ſt Ventoſe, mention another inſurrection in the ſquadron of Citizen Richery. The cauſe is found to originate in the diſtribution of the prize-money.

The crew of Barras hvae arreſted their officers, and that of the frigate Friponne have releaſed ſeveral volunteers who were in irons, and menaced the captain and officers to put them in their place. They have been ſet on by ſeveral Iriſh commercial houſes there. Theſe rebels had eſtabliſhed a tribunal aſhore; where they gave out they intended to try ſeveral officers:—But thanks to the firmneſs of admiral Richery, and the aſſiſtance he has received from the Spaniſh commandant, the inſurrection is appeaſed; and many of the actors in it arreſted. In the ſquadron about one hundred have been taken, and are continually going to France in order to be tried.

The ſquadron has orders to take on board ſix months proviſion and eight months wine. It is ſaid they will ſoon put to ſea and are ſuppoſed bound to India.

APRIL 11.

The reports of peace are various and contradictory.—Thoſe of one day deſtroy thoſe of the laſt.—But thoſe in favor of peace predominate.

They write from the army of the Rhine, that a new truce has been agreed upon between the armies of the republic and thoſe of Auſtria. In conſequence, the armies have retired to 25 leagues from each other on both ſides of the Rhine. A camp is forming between Maeſtricht and Venlo, and a ſecond between Treves and Luxembourg, where the tents and other camp apparatus are preparing.

We have cauſe to believe that the news of peace, which has been circulated, is not altogether apocryphal; but we are aſſured that no preliminaries will be entered into ſo abſurd and diſhonorable as thoſe threatened by the ſatellites of Pitt.

Gen. Bournonville is appointed to the command of the army of the North. On the 12th he reviewed the garriſon of Bruſſels.

[By an arrival at Norfolk.]

PORTSMOUTH, APRIL 12.

TRIAL OF ADMIRAL CORNWALLIS.

Thurſday morning at 8 o'clock, the ſignal gun for a Court Martial was fired, and the flag, as uſual upon ſuch occaſions, was hoiſted on board the Orion of 74 guns, lying in Potſmouth harbour.—Lord Howe, and the other members of the court, went on board about half paſt eight, and his Lordſhip's flag was then hoiſted. At nine the court was opened, and the members ſworn in. The following is a liſt of their names:

PRESIDENT.
Earl Howe, Admiral of the Fleet.

MEMBERS.
Sir Peter Barker, Bart. Admiral of the White.
Lord Bridport, ditto.
G. Vandeput, Eſq. Vice Admiral of the White.
Sir Allen Gardner, Bart. ditto.
Sir R. Curtis, Bart. Rear Admiral of the Red.
H. Harvey, Eſq. ditto.
R. R. Bligh, Eſq. ditto.
C. N. Poole, Eſq. Rear Admiral of the Blue.
J. Colpoys, Eſq. ditto. of the White.

CAPTAINS.
E. E. Nugent, Eſq.
Ch. Powell Hamilton, Eſq.
Edmund Dodd, Eſq.

JUDGE ADVOCATE.
Sir George Jackſon, Bart.

Admiral Cornwallis entered the court and had a ſide-table aſſigned to him for his papers, and the Hon. T. Erſkine.

Lord Howe then ſtated an outline of the charges to Admiral Cornwallis. They were three in number, and were introduced by ſtating the nature of his appointment, and the ſervice in which he was engaged; that whereas Admiral Cornwallis was, on the 10th of February laſt, appointed to the command of a ſquadron deſtined for the iſland of Barbados; and was ordered by a letter from the Admiralty, dated the 25th of the ſame month, to ſail from Spithead as ſoon as poſſible, taking under his convoy all the victuallers and tranſports then in readineſs, and to act on the Leeward Iſland ſtation, according to his inſtructions, or to ſuch further orders as he might receive from the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty; that the ſaid Vice-Admiral ſailed on the 28th of February, and that his ſhip being diſabled, he had been guilty of a neglect of duty in not ſhifting his flag to another ſhip, and proceeding, as is uſual in ſuch caſes, to the place of his deſtination; but had contrary to his inſtructions, and manifeſtly to the detriment of his Majeſty's ſervice, returned to port after delivering his orders to another officer; that afterwards he had been guilty of diſobedience to the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, by refuſing to proceed immediately in the Aſtrea frigate and join his ſquadron.

The orders were then read.

After which the evidence commenced with reading certain papers, charging the Admiral with diſobedience of orders, in not ſhifting his flag to the Aſtrea frigate, and proceeding to Barbados.

Sir Charles Cotton, captain of the Mars, was examined reſpecting the orders he received from the Admiralty, and his inſtructions from Admiral Cornwallis.

Mr. Tibbs, ſhip-builder, gave an account of the ſtate of the Royal Sovereign, declaring ſhe could not be repaired without going into dock.

Here the evidence for the proſecution cloſed.

THE DEFENCE.

The Admiral ſaid, that being indiſpoſed with a weakneſs in his eyes, he ſhould requeſt the indulgence of the court to permit his friend, Mr. Erſkine to read the paper which he had prepared in his defence. Permiſſion being granted, Mr. Erſkine proceeded, and after reading a variety of reaſons in juſtification of the Admiral's conduct in returning into port—not ſhifting his flag, &c. &c. read the following:

On the firſt charge I cannot but remark, that even after my return to Spithead I was continued in my command, and even honored with freſh marks of confidence. This manifeſtly ſhews, that though my judgment was diſapproved, ſtill I was not charged with the imputation of neglect of duty. Had I complied with the freſh orders and failed in the Aſtrea, I ſhould unqueſtionably not have been brought before this court martial to anſwer for my conduct on board the Royal Sovereign. An officer, ſtrongly ſuſpected of labouring under a charge ſo atrocious, would not have been employed in a ſtation ſo arduous and critical, while ſo many ſkilful and meritorious men could have been found to fill the appointment. My anſwer to the ſecond charge is ſo eſſentially involved in the firſt, that I ſhall not detain the court longer on that head.

I now proceed to the third charge, that of diſobedience, In the caſe of poſitive orders, I certainly had neither judgment to form, nor diſcretion to exerciſe. I had only to obey. I truſt that it forms no part of my principles, nor has it been the tendency of any action of my life, to ſhake the influence of ſubordination. I ſolemnly and firmly deny that I have been guilty of diſobedience of orders. When I received the order to go on board the Aſtrea, the object could no longer be the convoy. It muſt be with a view of acting upon the Leeward Iſland ſtation, and ſuch a commiſſion could not be lightly accepted, under circumſtances by which I was deprived of all the aſſiſtance on which I was moſt accuſtomed to rely. If the abridgment of my own convenience, and the ſacrifice of my health had been the only evils to be dreaded, I might have braved the worſt. But I was in no ſituation to accept of ſo ſerious a reſponſibility.

The paper likewiſe contained ſome remarks on the conduct of the Admiralty Board towards him, and concluded with declaring that his conſcience acquitted him of any blame.

Captain Whitby, T. Alexander, maſter, and Mr. Kaine, ſurgeon of the Royal Sovereign, were all examined, touching the Admiral's conduct, anxiety for the ſervice, health, &c.

Admiral Cornwallis then informed the court, that he had no more witneſſes to call, nor any more evidence, except ſome letters which had paſſed between him and the Lords of the Admiralty.

After the reading of ſome papers, and a few obſervations of no importance, the trial was cloſed a little before one. The court was then cleared, and the members remained there till four o'clock, when they broke up without determining their ſentence; and they are to ſit again to-morrow at nine.

[The following day the court pronounced ſentence, in the words of that given in the Mirror ſome few days ſince.]

NANTES, APRIL 1.

Charette, the generaliſſimo of the rebels, was tried, condemned and ſhot here the day before yeſterday. The concluſion of the account of his execution runs thus, "Between four and five o'clock, in the preſence of all the National guards, the garriſon in arms, and an immenſe number of people, on the market-place, after having conferred four minutes with General Travaux, and embracing his confeſſor, who deſired him to kneel, and have a bandage over his eyes, which he refuſed; after drawing his wounded arm from the ſling, and letting his hands fall by his ſide, ſtanding erect, with his eyes open, and without the leaſt emotion at the preparations and ſignal for firing, periſhed Francois-Athanaſe Charette, aged thirty three years, born at Couſſe, and who was a lieutenant of a man of war, before the Revolution; in the ſame ſpot where his couſin, le Marquis Charette de le Coliniere, chief of the Chouans, was ſhot the firſt of this month.

FROM A LONDON PAPER.

Feaſts and rejoicing (ſays a London paper) are preparing at Liverpool to celebrate that day, which condemned thouſands of our fellow creatures to the ſcourge, the withering rays of a burning ſun, and the galling fetters of an inhuman bondage! Thus the colour of complexion, ſtamps diſgrace on our ſpecies, and the miſerable Negro is deſtined, with his blood, to manure that ſoil, which muſt teem with luxuries for his ſofter tinted tyrant!!!

The faſhionable color at Liverpool next winter; will be the Sang de Negre, ſtriped with black. Theſe colors will alſo form the cockades at the next general election.

Our indecihon reſpecting the ſlave trade, will certainly affect our national character. The ſincerity of our profeſſions will be queſtioned. We have been calling this a juſt and neceſſary war; we have been profeſſing to fight for religion, humanity, and juſtice; we have been rouſing Europe to avenge the cauſe of God and man, and yet we refuſe to aboliſh the ſlave trade, which outrages every principle of juſtice, and violates all the duties of humanity. We have laviſhed ſo much of our humanity and juſtice upon France, that we have none to ſpare to Africa.

ASSIZE OF BREAD.

THE Three-penny Loaf to weigh 11 ounces—The price of Superfine Flour this day 58s.—60s..

A. M'CONNELL.

Alexandria, June 11.

FROM THE WEST-INDIES.

The Harriot, Captain Sandford, arrived here Yeſterday in 16 days from Barbados. The verbal accounts are, that the Britiſh were employing the utmoſt energy againſt St. Lucia—that the French were yet in poſſeſſion of the ſtrong fortreſs of Morne Fortuna, but it was a general opinion it could not long withſtand the powerful efforts of its aſſailants, who had nine batteries playing on it inceſſantly. No accounts of the capture of the Cork fleet.

At a Superior Court for Wilmington diſtrict, North Carolina, the grand jury agreed unanimouſly to the following reſolution:—"That the Preſident of the United States, by ratifying the Treaty with Great Britain, gave a freſh proof of his wiſdom and patriotiſm; and that the Members of Congreſs who, from a regard to good faith and the peace and happineſs of their country, voted for the neceſſary appropriations for carrying the ſaid treaty into operation, are juſtly entitled to the gratitude of their fellow-citizens."

TO THE

CITIZENS OF ALEXANDRIA.

An Engliſhman, that is come to make this place his reſidence, obſerved lately, with ſome degree of concern, the confuſion that was manifeſted at the time Meſſrs. Korn and Wiſemiller's warehouſe was on fire; and was convinced, from what he obſerved, that if the fire had been left undiſcovered for a little time longer than it was, the conſequences would have been fatal to a great part of the town. In order to prevent the like confuſion on a ſimilar occaſion, would recommend to the citizens of this place to form themſelves into companies, and have proper officers over them, that every man may know whoſe orders he is to obey. Every ſquare ſhould have one officer at leaſt, and all belonging to each ſquare ſhould know which engine they are to attend. Every man on the alarm of fire ſhould take his buckets with him filled with water from his houſe, that there might be no lack of water at the outlet, at which time it is moſt generally wanted; and once a month, at leaſt, the people ſhould aſſemble to learn their diſcipline.—If the Managers of the Fire Companies, or any other citizens, think any of theſe hints worthy of notice, let there be a meeting called for them to be taken into conſideration, and for alterations and amendments to be made at diſcretion.

June 10.

Extract of a letter from Port-au-Prince dated the 13th of May, to a merchant in Philadelphia.

"The Bite of Leogane is now ſo full of French privateers, that it is almoſt impoſſible for neutral veſſels to eſcape. You had better always order your veſſels bound here to call at the Mole for convoy."

Extract of a Letter, dated Bourdeaux April 3, to a Gentleman in George-Town.

"All buſineſs here is in entire ſtagnation, and no ſales for any article whatever at any price, but brandy, and that is very low; both French and Foreign produces are equally without vent, no want of bread or proviſions of any kind. Flour would not bring fifty livres per barrel, and wheat is is plenty in market at fourteen livres ſpecie per quintal (100lb. merct, wt. equal to 109lb. Engliſh) bills on Hamburgh continue to loſe 12 to 15 per cent. and England and America more, if it were poſſible to make any negociation, but it is not. This ſituation of of things ariſes from many cauſes, tho' the great one is, variable and uncertain meaſures of national Finance.

ANACREONTIC.

For she is fair beyond the brightest bloom,
Fair as the forms that's wove in Fancy's loom.
MASON.

IN vain we fill the sparkling bowl,
In vain indulge the flow of soul,
To cheer the heavy heart;
For where's the rest that wine can give,
Or song to make our spirits live,
If Phillis bears no part?

Then drink to Phillis, ever gay,
Sweet rival of the Rosy May,
And I'll get drunk for joy.
For say what's life without the sex,
A source of endless ills to vex,
And all our bliss destroy?

Then fill again the bumper high,
Let echo bear it to the sky,
The name of her we toast:
While catch & glee & sportive laugh,
Shall join the nectar'd wine we quaff,
Till time itself is lost.

Thus blest and happy, time may run,
And end our days, as we begun,
In spite of war's alarms;
For let divines say what they will,
There's that which sweeten's ev'ry ill,
In lovely woman's arms.
